“In the depth of Guthema's words, one indeed finds oneself coming home, to a place of solace, a place of peace, and a place of constant bliss. There is no better alchemy to what ails all of us in this modern world, then to return to the whispers of The Beloved found in Guthema Roba's divine poetry.” ?Paul Goldman, author of Journey into Oneness, Wild Joy: Ruminations and the spoken word CD Wild Joy: The Ecstatic Poetry of Paul Goldman

Crystal Heart

By A. K. L.

Please Come Home, by Guthema Roba is a book of poems that is a welcome alternative to the intellectual obscurity and dryness of much modern American poetry. These poems are effortless to read. In fact, they don't require energy: they provide energy. They gently draw the mind into the heart, quite literally, infusing warmth into the body and clarity into the intellect. The crystal-hearted openness of these poems brings American poetry back to the ancient devotional tradition of Rumi, Hafiz, Mirabai, Laladev, Saint John of the Cross, Saint Theresa. Reading these poems is a spiritual practice of healing.

The poetry of Guthema Roba

By helena

Thank you Guthema Roba for both of these beautiful poetry books. Please Come Home and Wake up and Roar, are works of pure genius. As a poetry teacher before retirement from official teaching, I would have loved to introduce your exquisite work to young people and feel sure English teachers will be doing that now. I look forward to buying a new book from yours that includes the wonder-filled poetry that you share with us on Facebook together with the images. All my love and blessings. May your words of wisdom and love extend and extend.

... magic and they dance within the heart and soul like a song of joy

By Barbara Jean

Guthema's words are pure magic and they dance within the heart and soul like a song of joy! He writes with a joy and melody that stay and linger within your heart, long after you have read it. A book that speaks to the heart! He writes in the same style as Rumi and it captures your breath and heart, each time you read anything he writes. Truly a book to treasure!!
