When a blinding snow storm, a car crash, and near hypothermia result in a night of unexpected passion for ex-model Chantel Miller and architect Dillon Broderick, they both welcome the spark that flares between them. But when Dillon turns out to be the man Chantel's sister has set her sights on and Chantel's manipulative ex-boyfriend returns to take her back to New York, things become more complicated. Well-defined characters, realistic problems, and intense interpersonal relationships are hallmarks of the "Superromance" series, and this title is no exception. Featuring a multilayered plot, a pair of conflicted but appealing protagonists (and their equally conflicted relatives), and social issues that run the gamut from sibling rivalry to anorexia, this story should appeal to readers who like their romances with a sophisticated touch. Novak (Of Noble Birth) lives in Sacramento, CA.

Great story.

By Evelyn F. Mitchell

Brenda Novak writes good books. I love all of the books she writes. I especially like the ones where the characters are continued in the next book.

It's a little flat & predictable

By Ecclectic

I really enjoyed Branda Novak's Whiskey Creek series and Dundee, Idaho so I was looking for more of her books. I was disappointed with this book because it was a little shallow and not as sincere as others. After finishing it I looked at the date it was written and it was 2000. So her writing has gone from strength to strength. Of course it's a romance so they are predictable but even the characters were a little "meh". It's a so-so book.
